More About Cass County Local Food Policy Council

The Cass County Local Food Policy Council is a Cass County Government advisory body that promotes local foods and food access. The Council facilitates networking among people and groups who are involved in all aspects of the local food system—from growing and processing, to selling and eating.

In its work, the Council gathers information about local food-related needs and considers what might be done to make sure everyone in Cass County has access to healthy food. The Council then makes recommendations and supports organizations working toward that goal.

For more information on local food, farmers markets, and food access, follow the Cass County Local Food Policy Council's Facebook page @CassCountyLocalFood.
